Dear Allison,

At a recent Full Council meeting, I was made aware that residents living near the A34 in Oxfordshire, which is in our district council area, frequently raise concerns about the amount of litter which accumulates along the dual carriageway and ask for the council's support in addressing this issue.

National Highways are responsible for clearing litter on England's motorways. However, litter picking along the A34 (and other National Highways owned major A roads) is the responsibility of the district councils like ours, through which the road passes.

District councils must be granted access to these major A roads by National Highways in order to collect litter. Permission is only given when the A34 is closed for maintenance works, as it is not safe for council staff or our waste contractor's staff to work on the carriageway while it is open to traffic.

Although Vale of White Horse District Council and our contractors work hard to coordinate litter clearance on the A34, this is time consuming, costly and depends on multiple organisations coordinating staff availability during road closures, which often occur overnight and at short notice. Plans for maintenance can also change at short notice, meaning that not every opportunity to conduct litter picking can be seized.

This coordination must be being repeated in every council area through which each National Highways major A road passes through, and other principal litter authorities along the A34 will therefore face a similar challenge, which is far from efficient. If National Highways were responsible for this element of cleansing, then they could coordinate much more efficiently and effectively, which would likely achieve better results at lower cost to the taxpayer than at current.

I have recently written to Rt Hon Heidi Alexander MP - Secretary of State for Transport to request for a change to the 1990 Environmental Protection Act, so the responsibility for litter clearance on all National Highways major assets where it limits access to street cleansing crews is transferred from local councils to National Highways.

I wanted to make you aware of this correspondence and also request that you and colleagues within National Highways amplify national messaging, and other ways, to tackle the cultural acceptance of littering from vehicles on fast roads as litter not only looks untidy but can also have a negative impact on people's mental health, wildlife, and the local economy.

Yours sincerely

R. Clegg
